CIA Picketing At UCSD May Bring Penalty

UCSD students yesterday picketed a building where a Central Intelligence Agency representative was interviewing hopeful intelligence agents.

He disappeared after the first interview and university officials said they didn't know whether he would return.

Disciplinary action may be taken against 20 to 40 students for marching and chanting through the building twice with their protest signs, UCSD officials said.

The student pickets apparently did not block anyone from entering the building housing the career counseling office, a wooden frame structure in the old Camp Matthews part of the campus and far removed from any of the classroom areas at UCSD.

"Entry into the building may have been a violation of the campus time, place and manner rules for such activities," said UCSD Chancellor William McGill.

"We don't want to violate the rights of those who want to talk to these men," he said.
